

Track D: Social, Behavioural and Implementation Science

Udi Davidovich, Netherlands

Udi Davidovich is a clinical psychologist and a doctor of social psychology. He works at the Department of Research at the Public Health Service of Amsterdam, the Netherlands, in association with the University of Amsterdam, as a senior researcher, manager and PhD supervisor. Udi leads the psychosocial research line in the department, as well as the unit for Online Research and Prevention. Since 1998, Udi has concentrated on the study of HIV- and STI-related sexual risk among various key populations and the translation of these findings into prevention strategies, both nationally and abroad. In recent years, Udi has specialized in the usage of the Internet and mobile technologies for the development and evaluation of prevention interventions. He is an international editorial board member of the journal, AIDS Care, and the journal, Sexuality Research and Social Policy. Since 2016, Udi has been the Vice Chair of AFEW International (AIDS Foundation East-West).