

Track D: Social, Behavioural and Implementation Science

Souhail Malavé-Rivera, Puerto Rico

Souhail Malavé-Rivera has a PhD in social-community psychology from the University of Puerto Rico (UPR). Currently, she is an Adjunct Professor at the Graduate School of Public Health at the UPR, Medical Sciences Campus. She is Co-Director of the Sex+TEAM, a group of researchers at the UPR-MSU that investigates, intervenes and promotes comprehensive health, especially in sexual minorities in Puerto Rico. Her research is supported by the CDC Minority HIV/AIDS Research Initiative and the National Institute of Mental Health. She is interested in the intersection of the social determinants of health associated with HIV transmission, as well as the study of health disparities with special interest in sexuality, LGBT health and youth.